Unfortunately Blade Runner: The Edge of Human, did exactly this. I really wanted to love this book, but it unnecessarily explained far too much. Jeter obviously felt there were several things that didn't make sense, or could be expande Someone once said to me that fan-fiction has a habit of trying to explain problems away, rather than trying to tell an original story.

Razors, scalpels, and knives are commonly made from stainless steel, honed to a razor-sharp edge and coated with even harder materials such as diamond-like carbon. However, knives require regular sharpening, while razors are routinely replaced after cutting materials far softer than the blades themselves. Now engineers at MIT have studied the simple act of shaving up close, observing how a razor blade can be damaged as it cuts human hair – a material that is 50 times softer than the blade ...
